DIRECTIONS

---

This diary, or account book, contains a page for each day, a place for a farm inventory, a page for outline map of farm, a place for feed and care of live stock, and a summary for the crops and stock.

Write the records regularly, counting it a part of your daily farm work.

Make a note of the weather, and of what you and your hired men did during the day.

On those crops, and things in which you are especially interested, be careful to carry out the hours of man and horse labor in the columns.

Aside from the farm records, make notes of anything that happened in the neighborhood that day, unusual occurrences, items of family interest, and, in fact, anything which you feel is worth mentioning.

Be careful not to make your records too general in character, as then one day will not be much different from another.

Be specific, and never let a day go past without putting down something.

On the bottom of the page enter an account of anything bought or sold that day. Household and personal items may be omitted if desired.

At end of each month, turn to the pages in back of book that are provided for the purpose and note your estimate of the feed consumed during that month by the various classes of live stock, and also note the average time per day, in minutes, necessary to care for this live stock.

Do not forget the most important part of all, and that is—to take the farm inventory when you start in keeping the records and record same on pages for that purpose in back of book.

SPECIAL SUGGESTION FOR KEEPING CASH ACCOUNT

---

It is suggested that the cash account be kept with care and completeness, and that all items of farm receipts and expenses be recorded in detail, so that there will be no difficulty in their perfect interpretation at some later date. It is not necessary to itemize the personal and household items, although it is desirable to include them for the purpose of completing the record of expense.

Illustrations of desirable and complete, and undesirable and incomplete, detail in entries follow :
